Effective synergy between UMP and AKEPT in promoting leadership organisation

The Higher Education Leadership Academy (AKEPT) has intensified its engagement programme with leadership and governance that would support the sustainability of competency-based talent management.

Universiti Malaysia Pahang (UMP) and the academy jointly organised a programme, 'Leadership Cafe and Innovation Leadership Engagement Programme (ILeAP)', that focused on personnel profiling and measures taken towards the making of a sustainable organisation.

It was pertinent to identify the right and capable talents to be groomed as future industrial leaders.

More than 30 participants comprising the university's top management attended the programme which was held on August 1, 2019.

Among them were AKEPT Director, Professor Dr. Nordin Yahaya, AKEPT's Centre for Leadership Programme Director, Professor Dr. Ismie Roha Mohamed Jais, Chairman of UMP Board of Directors, Dato' Sri Ibrahim Ahmad, Azhar Wan Yusoff and Chief Operating Officer/Registrar, Associate Professor Dr. Mohd. Ridzuan Darun.

According to Professor Ir. Dr. Wan Azhar, only a leader could take the lead towards a positive change.

“On this, UMP has taken the initiative of having a competency profiling among its staff based on their position. It is a systematic way to ensure that the pool of talent formed are those with leadership qualities, the front-runner,” he said.

Professor Dr. Nordin said he was pleased with the commitment showed by UMP and UMP Advanced in conducting the Executive Diploma programme - Professional Diploma in Competency Based Talent Management (CBTM).

He added that it was a step forward that would further enrich the existing leadership talents in the country’s public service.

“AKEPT plays a role too in providing reports of candidates to be selected at the ministry level.

“The report includes leadership score, information on academic achievement, publication, research and community partnership as well as networking,” he said.

He said the report would only entitle the candidate for consideration and an interview session would assess the candidate’s suitability for the position.

He also suggested that the university’s top management to attend leadership module that had been put in place. It is an activity to be carried out since the process was to be conducted systematically.

The programme also focused on the mechanism that had been applied by AKEPT in profiling the educational institution to move to enhance the individual’s leadership competency.

In the process, it helped the individual to identify his or her strength and make the necessary improvements. It also helped in participating in development programmes provided by AKEPT.

Everyone’s responsible to uphold dignity of Nation

Teachers, lecturers, educators and parents alike will have to play their exemplary roles in upholding the dignity of the Malay Language among the younger generations in the country today.

The prominence of the Malay Language as the country's National Language is sanctified by Article 152 of the Federal Constitution, the colonization of the Federation of Malaya on August 31, 1957, and the formation of Malaysia on September 16, 1963.

According to the highly regarded Malay Language expert, Professor Emeritus Datuk Dr. Nik Safiah Karim, every Malaysian citizen should include having a good command of the national language, and mastering of the global languages, the second, third and fourth other widely-spoken languages.

Speaking at a scholarly serial talks organized by Universiti Malaysia Pahang (UMP) recently, Professor Emeritus Datuk Dr. Nik Safiah Karim said a national language is the flagship symbol of a nation's sovereignty and the identity of her citizen, whilst English is the key to the outside world, as well as the fundamental language to access knowledge and pursuit of life-long education.

“On that note, aside from taking pride in loving and mastering the national language, as Malaysians, we should also learn English and master it, while simultaneously upholding the national language as the key to our national unity and integrity.”

The existing pluralism of ethnicity, religion and culture has shaped the characteristics of Malaysia population. It presents a unique challenge in building national identity and sustainable unity – but fortunately, Professor Emeritus Datuk Dr. Nik Safiah Karim's promote national language became its means to universally-unparalleled union.

“The drive for a national identity has to be ingrained and continuously reinforced throughout childhood – with respect and love for the national language and country,” emphasized the linguist.

“Today, as we move forward into the 21st century, we are faced with the challenges of reinventing a nation which is also engulfed in the era of globalization, and science and technology – when the importance of language is intertwined,” she added.

During the talk, Professor Emeritus Datuk Dr. Nik Safiah also shared the history of the Malay Language, with roots as early as 7th century in Sumatera, Indonesia, and 14th century in Kuala Berang, Terengganu.

In between the two discoveries, she said, in the 13th century, Islam finally reached the shores of the Malay Peninsula. Malay excellence and cultural centres began to sprout at the capitals of territories under the rule of Samudra Pasai (1489-1511), Aceh (1511-1650) and Johor-Riau (1650-1800).

The scholarly serial talks dubbed “Siri Bicara Cendekiawan Mulia UMP” is organized by the Association of Malay Language Professionals with the Office of Vice-Chancellor (PNC).

Discussing the theme 'Bahasa Melayu dan Perneriksaan Identiti Nasional dalam Era Malaysia Baharu', on the theme of Language and Reinforcement of National Identity under the New Malaysia Era', the scholarly serial talk held at UMP is organized by the Head of Human Sciences Department of the Centre for Modern Languages & Human Sciences (CMLHS).

The second speaker for the day, renowned Malay Language proponent and founder of Yayasan Budi, Tan Sri Dr. Rais emphasized the tertiary learning objectives set by the Ministry of Education (MoE), local public institutions of higher learning to uphold the dignity of the Malay Language, employing it as a daily communication tool and applying the language in various fields.

“In addition, the Malays themselves should take pride in speaking in Malay, and collectively, practice the language in their daily lives, including traditions, including traditional attires,” Tan Sri Dr. Rais emphasized.

“What is practically alarming and worrisome nowadays, we no longer find books, technical manuals and professional journals in Malay,” he added.

into Malay by Dewan Bahasa & Pustaka, for the purpose of teaching and learning,” he lamented.

Tan Sri Dr. Rais raised his concerns that the Malay Language is seen lagging behind, in its application and use in trade and commerce.

“In fact, even roads and residential areas are no longer named using the Malay Language,” he bemoaned.

Tan Sri Dr. Rais proposed that utilization of the Malay Language in communal interactions should be promoted and should not be mixed up with other languages.

“A national identity is strictly linked to the national language, and henceforth, such national identity could not be lost.”

The 'Siri Bicara Cendekiawan Mulia UMP' talks is a monthly programme showcasing in-depth discourse on various issues from within the country and from abroad.

These figures will speak on and dissect the current state of affairs of a particular theme, across all dimensions, for the benefits of those at UMP, specifically, and the surrounding communities, generally.

The scholarly serial talks is part and parcel of UMP's commitments to transform the university into an open university with various activities of mature debates as well as sanely discussions.

The July talk was graced by UMP Chairman, Dato' Sri Ibrahim Ahmad; UMP Vice-Chancellor, Professor Tan Sri Dr. President, Mohd. Hairul Ab Rahim.

It also saw attendance of staff from Centre of Foundation Studies of International Islamic University of Malaysia, the corporations of Library and Museum, Pahang Hall of Malay Literature, as well as teachers and educators from various schools in Pekan.
